1. By entering an address on the website, customers can view an estimated stock status for each store. Instead of showing specific quantities, the site categorizes stock levels into three statuses: "low stock", "unlikely to have stock", and "most likely to have stock". While exact numbers aren't provided, these statuses are updated every few hours, giving customers useful and timely inventory insights.

To effectively monitor inventory across all stores, it's important to carefully select a list of addresses for checking stock status. In the future, this process could be streamlined by the introduction of an API; currently, Woolworths does not provide one. This is an area to watch for possible improvements going forward.

2. The StoreInventory.AmountInStock field can be roughly mapped to numerical values based on the stock status provided on the website. For example:

"low stock" can be represented as 5

"unlikely to have stock" as 0

"most likely to have stock" as 20

These values should be carefully determined to reflect the store's inventory situation. By assigning these numbers, this parameter becomes useful for comparing inventory levels across different brands' stores.

3. The StoreInventory.StoreId can be obtained from the Stores table by matching the StoreName.
